What the CEO needs to know

- Revenue more than doubled from January to June — strong upward trajectory.
- All three stores perform almost identically; no underperformer to fix.
- Coffee + Tea drive 71% of revenue; mornings dominate the day.
- Bakery and Drinking Chocolate are sizable secondary engines worth bundling.

Monthly Revenue Trend

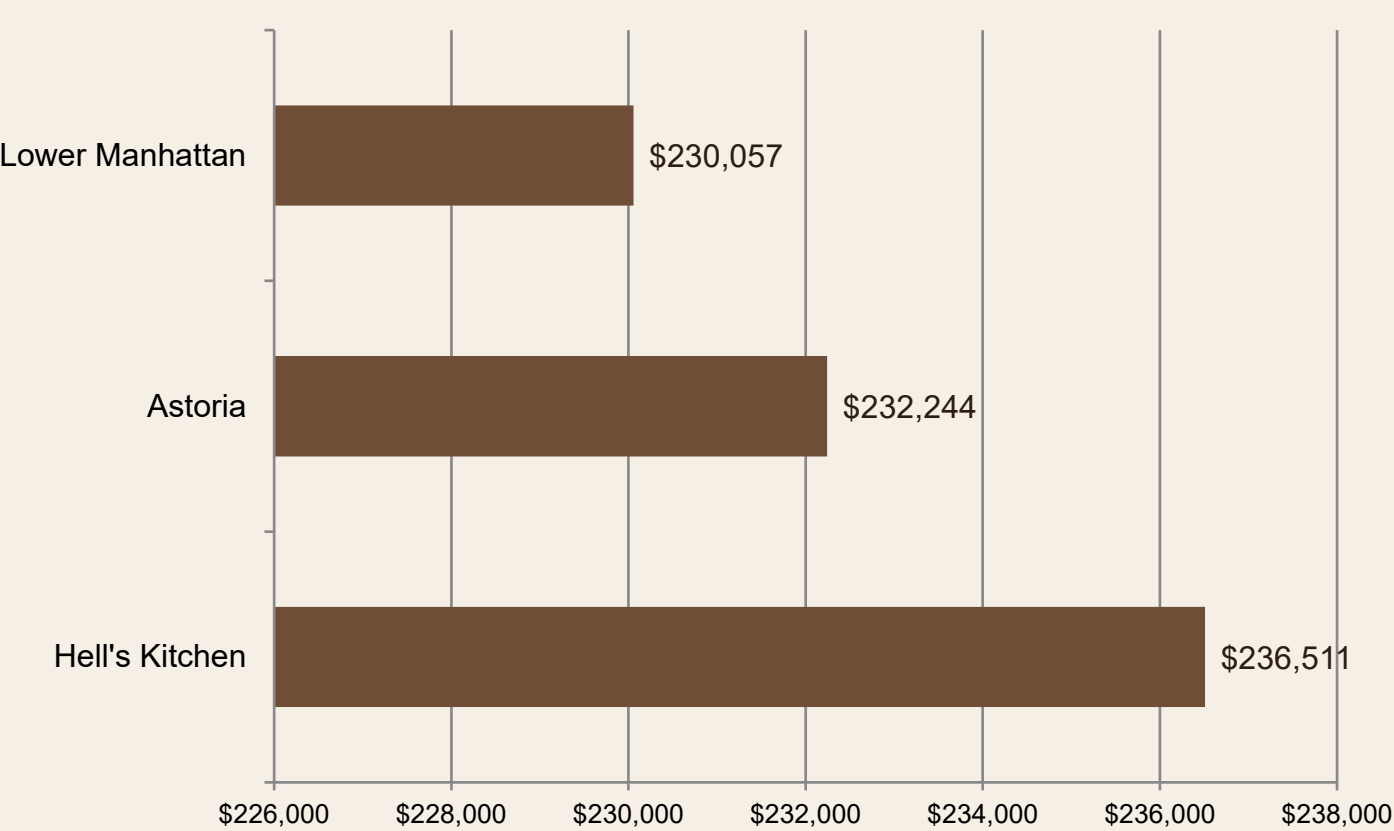

Total sales across all three stores, Jan–Jun 2023

KEY INSIGHT Revenue grew 104% from $82K in January to $166K in June — momentum is accelerating, not plateauing.

Revenue by Store

Six-month total per location

Store Standings

- 1 Hell's Kitchen $237K
- 2 Astoria $232K
- 3 Lower Manhattan $230K

Spread between top and bottom: only 2.7%

KEY INSIGHT All three stores generate nearly identical revenue (within 3%) — performance is uniform, not concentrated.

Store Growth Trajectory

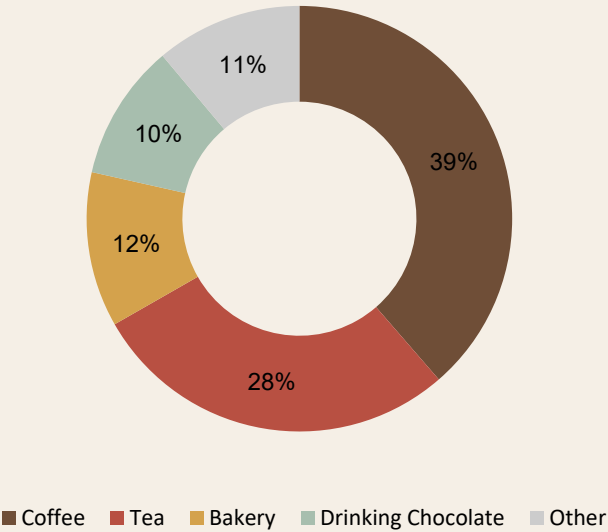

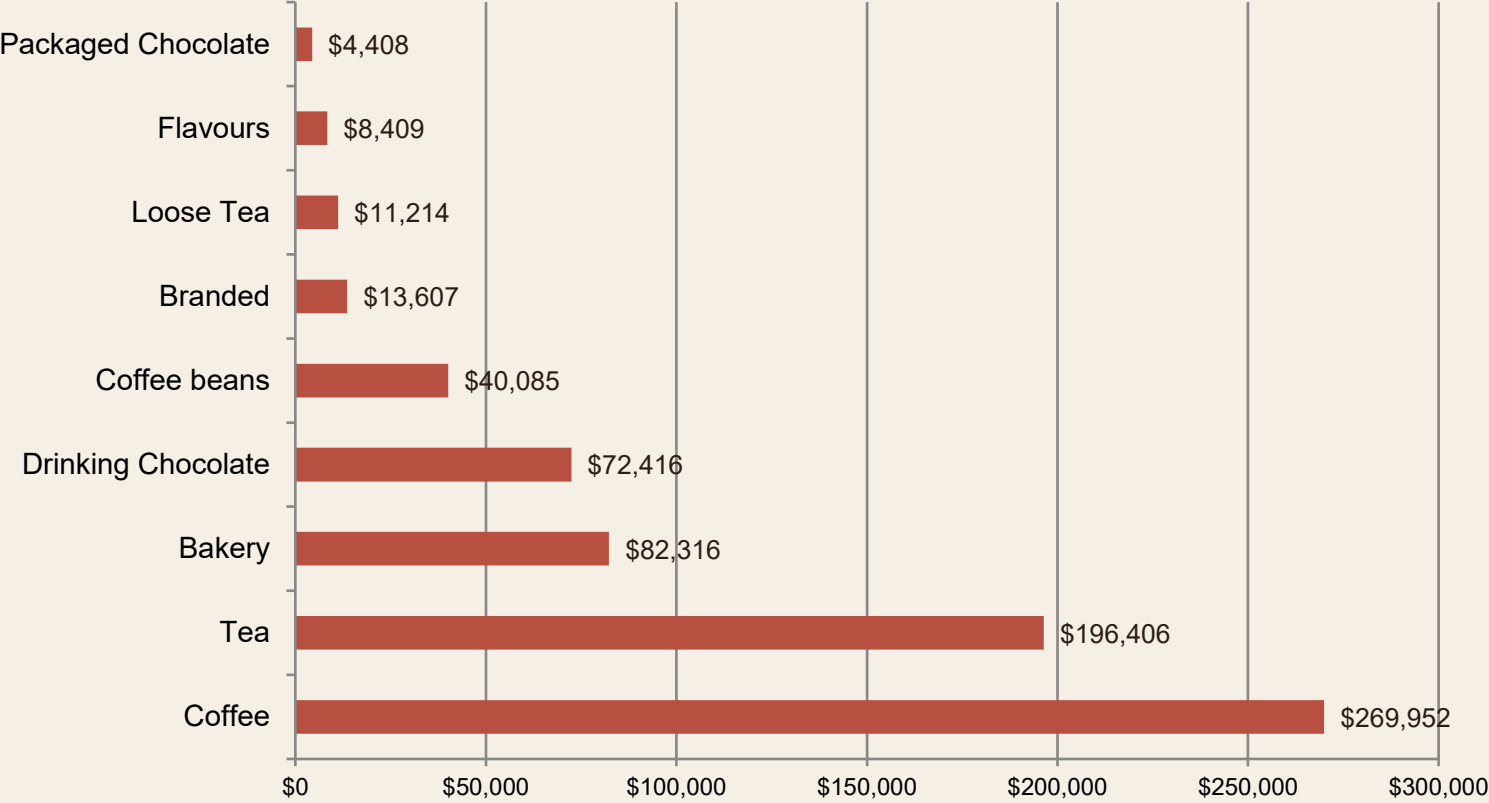

Are all stores growing at the same pace?

KEY INSIGHT All three stores grew in lockstep — growth is driven by category trends, not a single breakout location.

Revenue by Product Category

Where the money comes from

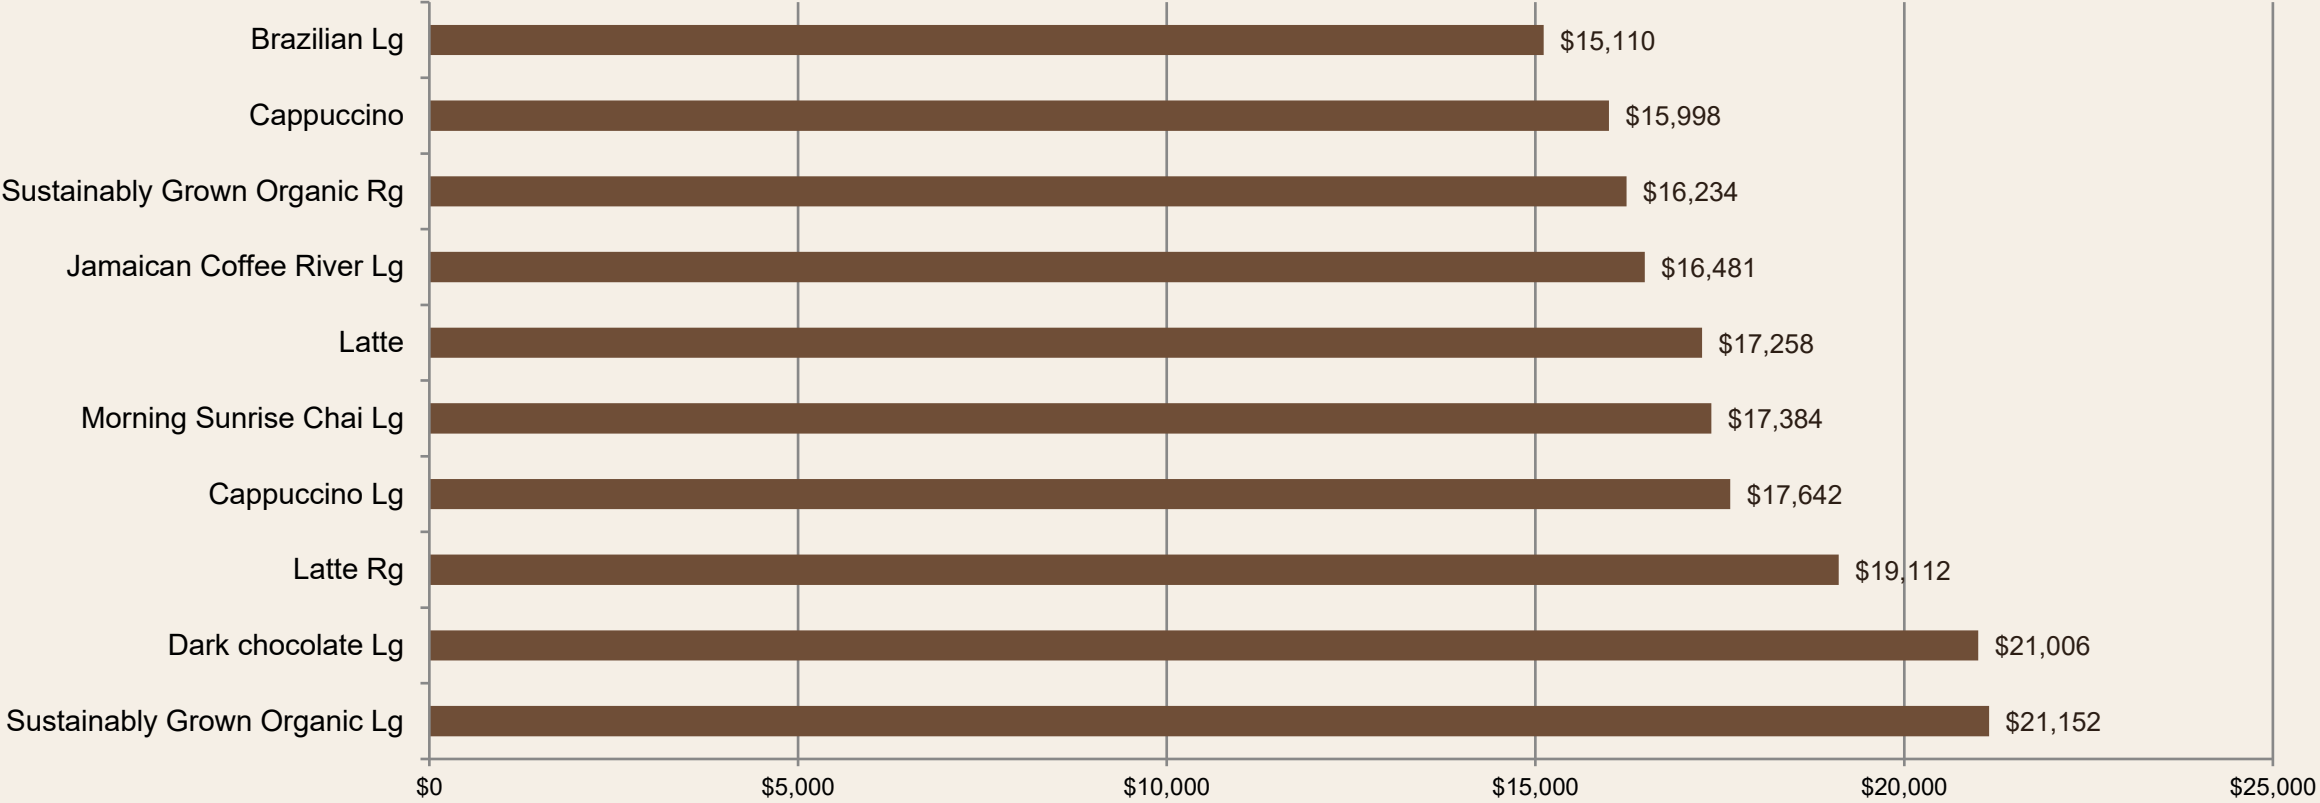

Share of revenue

KEY INSIGHT Coffee (40%) and Tea (29%) drive 71% of revenue — the core menu, not the long tail, pays the bills.

Top 10 Products by Revenue

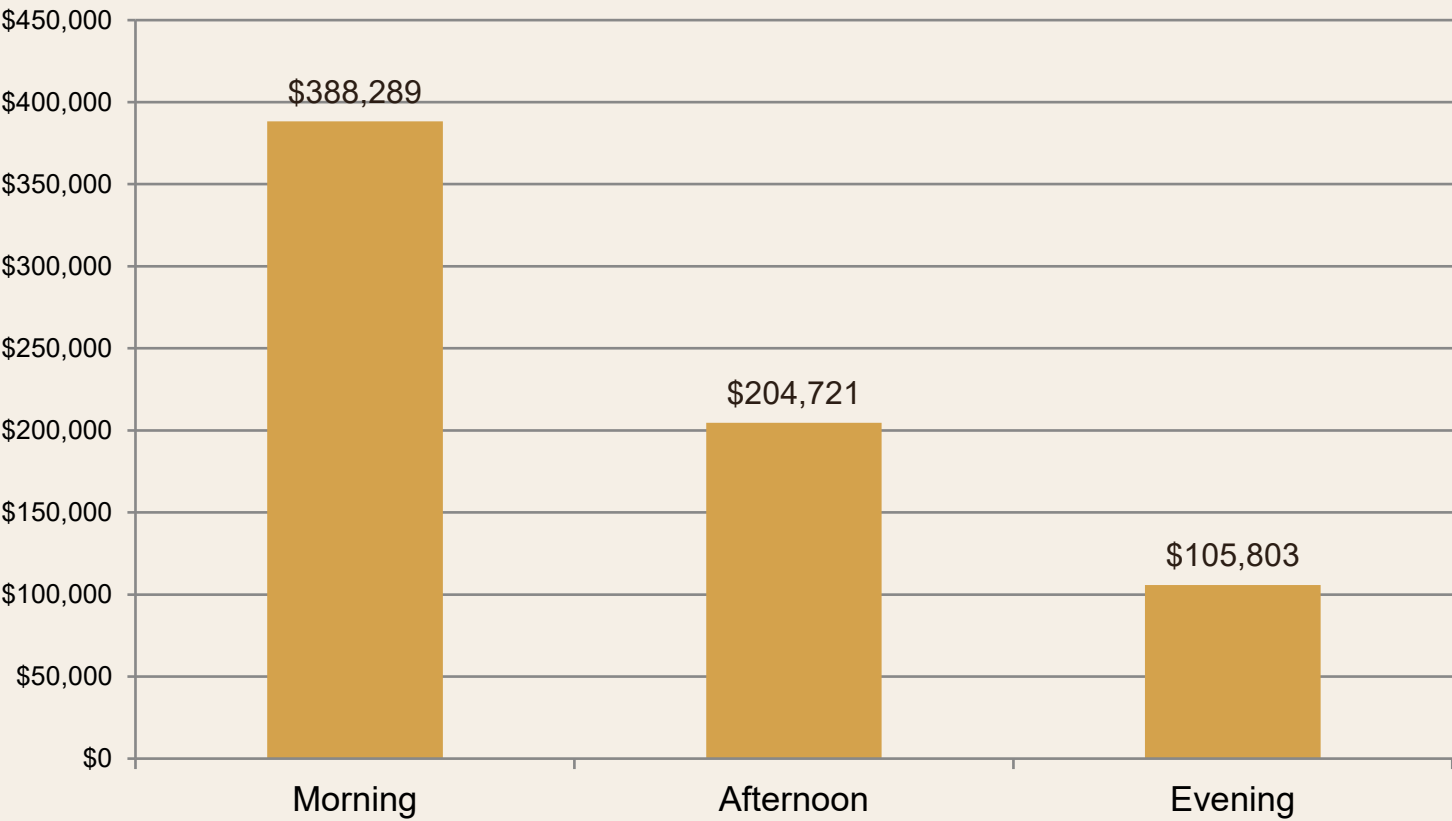

The hero SKUs across all stores

KEY INSIGHT Large-size drinks (Lg) dominate the top sellers — upsizing customers is the single biggest revenue lever.

When Customers Buy

Revenue distribution by time of day

Weekday vs Weekend

Weekday

$3,874

avg revenue / day

Weekend

$3,828

avg revenue / day

KEY INSIGHT Mornings deliver 56% of revenue and weekdays slightly outperform weekends — staff and stock for the AM rush.

Category Performance by Store

Do all stores sell the same mix?

KEY INSIGHT Category mix is remarkably consistent across stores — playbook successes can be rolled out to all three at once.

Four moves for the next 90 days

01

Double down on the morning peak

Add staff and a "morning combo" (coffee + bakery) Mon–Fri 7–10am.

02

Push large-size upsells

Train baristas on a "go large for $1" prompt — top sellers are already Lg SKUs.

03

Bundle Coffee with Drinking Chocolate & Bakery

Secondary categories grow basket size without new product launches.

04

Prune the long tail

Bottom 10 SKUs (Earl Grey, Lemon Grass, etc.) earn <$1.5K each — review or replace.
